

It's been a pretty eventful year for the Best Jordans Shoes, from Premium renditions of the sneaker from the 'Flight Jacket' to the upcoming 'Triple Black' colorway to the 'Fire & Ice' Pack that is sure to receive a good reception from the sneaker community and this... The Air Jordan V 'Camo'. A sneaker once rumored to be a BAPE collaboration has finally been given the official photo treatment. All of which can be viewed above.

Classic silhouettes have been popping up more and more lately and the Jordan 4 For Sale has been at the front of the pack. We have seen the shoe return in various forms this year and up we see that Nike has another pack on the way. Official images have just landed of the upcoming "All Over Logo" collection that will feature three colorways of the AF1 Low.

The Cheap Curry 4 has the natural ability to turn heads by itself but, in combination with bright hues like these, this particular rendition of the classic silhouette has the potential to become a coveted colorway in the future. The kicks take on a 'Metallic Silver' textile canvas base complete with 'Atlantic Blue' overlays in what appears to be both nubuck and leather while 'Voltage Yellow' micro-Nike branding hits the side panel of the kicks as well as the full-length visible Zoom AIR tech installed into the balancing white midsole and black rubber detailing closes the kicks out.
