

As the Drop Jordan Panthers gear up for another season, and another chance at winning their first Super Bowl, success will still hinge on their former MVP QB in Cam Newton. This season, Newton was awarded his first sig shoe from Under Armour: the C1N.

Cam debuted the shoe in a commercial with Buty Jordan Sklep and wore a cleated version during Preseason in the Panthers themed "Chairman" colorway. Featuring a Knit construction with a Forefoot strap and Micro G cushion technology and a Charged Cushioning crash pad under the heel for absorption, this shoe looks to be the perfect shoe to handle the play style of Newton.

A Classic Cheap Air Max Colorway is reportedly set to make a big return during Complex-Con. Similar to last year's AF1 drops and returns, we will get the same treatment for this year. The "Roc-A-Fella" Air Force 1 first made it's release in 2004, and instantly became a classic for fans and collectors of the AF1. The shoe is similar to the White-on-White Air Force 1, but featured the Roc logo on the Heel. With Jay-Z's 13th album 4:44 seeing release earlier this year, it's only appropriate that the shoe makes it return on the 13th anniversary of its release
