

There will be three colorways scheduled to release, the new Jordan 32 “Rosso Corsa”, which is a “Red Suede” colorway with Italian roots as a nod to the Air Jordan 2. It also comes with the word “Bellissimo” on a tag inside the tongue. Next up is the Air Jordan 32 “Bred” as well as an Air Jordan 32 Low that will celebrate “MJ Day” on October 18th.

Constructed with Nike’s Flyknit covering the upper with high-tenacity yarn that combines stretch, support and zonal lockdown. Its cushioned sole features a tuned-up Flight Speed technology that unleashes the energy of Zoom Air units. Finishing off the design is its herringbone traction pattern that delivers multidirectional grip. Jordan Brand is dropping a twist on the classic “Flu Game” new Jordan 12 just for girls. The upcoming colorway replaces the shade of Bulls-red with hot pink for a decidedly feminine look to the iconic sneaker. They do differ from the color block of the OG black and red cversion just a bit, as the “Jumpman” branded TPU piece on the midfoot is grey instead of matching the pink paneling and sole.

The new Jordan 1 Los Primeros releases on October 13th with an MSRP of $160.

Designed in collaboration with Brazilian artist Thales Fernando aka Pomb, this Air Jordan 1 is inspired by “roots” and represents the history, culture, myths, and diversity of the Latino heritage. The illustrations seen on the tongue and etched into the black upper reflects Pomb’s signature style that can be seen on gorgeous murals throughout Brazil.
