

To honor Best Jordans Shoes's Eightieth Birthday, Nike has announced the PK80 tournament. The tournament will consist of various Nike sponsored NCAA teams (mens and womens), and will be done in double bracket format. Participating programs include Arkansas, Butler, Connecticut, Duke, DePaul, Florida, Gonzaga, Michigan State, North Carolina, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oregon, Portland, Portland State, Stanford and Texas. Men's games will be played at Moda Center and Veterans Memorial Coliseum. Also, the women's teams of Connecticut, Michigan State, Oklahoma and Oregon will take the court at Knight Arena in Eugene, on Nov 25.

Also for the tourney, Latest Jordans Shoes has unveiled Black/Iridescent colorways of the Kyrie 3, PG 1, Kobe AD and KD 10, which will be worn by the teams. Also, Jordan Brand-sponsored North Carolina will wear either the Air Jordan 32 or the Super.Fly 2017 in the colorway. The color choice was inspired by Knight, who is infamous for his attire of All black and Sunglasses. Unfortunately this collection will not be available for retail.

Cheap Jordan Shoes's relationship with Gatorade is almost as important as his relationship with Nike. In 1991 (the year of the Air Jordan 6), MJ became Gatorade's first endorser and produced the iconic "Be Like Mike" ad, paving the way for more successful sports drinks. Jordan Brand planned on dropping an Air Jordan 6 to honor the relationship this month but the release has been pushed to later this year. Sporting a similar look to the 'Carmine' 6s (the shoe MJ wore in the Gatorade ad), the shoe has a White, Orange, and Green colorway. Additional features highlight the famous ad with the "If I Could Be" slogan on the inner tongues, Gatorade insoles, and lace-locks that mimic the Gatorade bottles.