

Before the Drop Jordan, Nike had three revolutionary Basketball shoes: The Nike Blazer, the iconic Nike Air Force 1 and the Nike Vandal. While the Blazer and AF1 have consistently been featured in new collections with updated tech and etc., the Vandal is regulated to more occasional one off projects. However, the Vandal will make a return in its OG form later this year.

Last seen in 2011, the Buty Jordan Sklep "Concord might make its return in OG form. Nothing's confirmed thus far, but if the Concord Jordan 11 will drop, not only could it potentially be the biggest release ever, but also we have the potential of getting "45" on the heel, special edition packaging, full family sizes, and the works.

The Cheap Air Max 1.0 has been the toughest Nike shoes to get your hands on and Nike is finally about to do a wider release of this shoe in a brand new colorway. The automatic lacing shoes that Nike has developed is rumored to be heading to retailers next month in a 'Sport Royal' look. This would be the first HyperAdapt to feature a colored Flyknit upper ever, the last pair that was previewed by Soccer star Cristiano Ronaldo and had a red Nike "Swoosh" branding.