

For fans of the Drop Jordan, there's, fortunately, plenty of options for you to choose from. The 1 has seen a number of colorways in various material mixes and styles. Though it doesn't quite match the hype of OG releases, it's still nice to have some options. In light of that, this upcoming "Los Primeros" iteration is a welcome sight.

The upper on this special edition features a Vans-reminiscent tonal upper, dressed in what look to be laser-etched graphics. The designs cover the shoes upper, giving it quite the unique look for an Air Jordan 11 Win Like 96. Though it's all Black on the lateral panels, the insoles, toe box, and tongue carry some colorful art work. This seems to be courtesy of Brazilian artist Thales Fernando whose alias, POMB, is etched onto the sneakers' heel tabs.

The Doernbecher Freestyle 2017 Collection should be ready to be unveiled any day now, but one pair in the collection is unveiled a little early. The Buty Jordan Sklep Vapormax "Doernbecher is done by 15-year old Andrew Merydith, an avid Seattle Seahawks fan battling cystic fibrosis. You can clearly see that influence in the shoe, utilizing the NFL team's colors. The tongue features Andrew's initials, and "#ILOVETHEFAM" appears on the Black Vapormax unit. Lastly, the sole is decked out in the bright green color.

Lebron Cheap Air Max fifteenth silo has seen quite a few flavors since it was teased last month. On Media Day, Lebron showed off a "Cavs" colorway, and thanks to @timday087, we have a closer look at the shoe. The shoe features a navy and wine battleknit upper, with red and gold trims all throughout the shoe. The shoe also features a navy midsole and translucent red full zoom air cushioning for the outsole. Look for this shoe to hit stores reportedly on Dec. 1.
