

Kareem Drop Jordan Burke was front and center this past weekend with reintroducing us to the retro of the "Roc-a-Fella" Air Force 1 that dropped at ComplexCon.

However, that's not all that was shown off.

On the feet of the Air Jordan 11 Win Like 96 was a pair of Jordan IVs that were inspired by Jay-Z's first album Reasonable Doubt. The shoe featured a black and white color base, with the cover of the album on the tongue. Also of note on the shoe, was chrome accents for the eyelets.

Additionally, there was also a pair of Buty Jordan Sklep Force 1s dedicated to the album as well. Also featuring the black and white colorway with the album on the tongue tag, the shoe featured "Reasonable Doubt" branding on the quarter as well.

No word on if these are just 1 of 1s or not, but on Biggs instagram, the Jordan IV's were captioned with Cheap Air Max implying that the shoes could see release. Stick with Sneakerwatch as more info is announced.